

Announcing the marriage of two great ideas...SeaGreen Cottage. A Sustainable Getaway by the Sea!! SeaGreen Cottage is a new sustainably-built vacation rental located at Going Green at the Beach. Fifty miles away from Seattle and less than 50 feet away from total relaxation, you'll enjoy walks on the beach, kayaking, or shopping and dining in the quaint shops and restaurants in nearby Stanwood, Camano Island and La Conner.

The 350-square-foot suite provides you a private entrance, a great view of the water, a queen-sized bed and a bathroom with shower. There is also a kitchenette and small dining area; a stacking washer and dryer; and a stereo and TV with DVD. Guests will have access to the beach, hot tub and patio overlooking Port Susan Bay. Here you'll have the chance to unwind while reading a book; bird-watching for eagles, osprey, heron and other shore birds; and savoring the ever-changing sunsets. You can also comb the beach at low tide for beach glass, shells and rocks.

You can also spend your time learning about building and living "green." Private tours of the award-winning main house, Going Green at the Beach, can be arranged. Through their business, Porterworks, the owners teach classes/provide consulting on building a green home, living and cooking green, and ways to green your business.

The Cottage is especially well-suited for guests with environmental sensitivities. It was built to American Lung Association Health House standards. Paints and finishes are low- or no-VOC. A cork floor with in-floor radiant heat and formaldehyde-free cabinets and millwork create healthier indoor air quality.

However you choose to enjoy it, SeaGreen Cottage will soon become your favorite little getaway!
